Advanced Dental Procedures and Oral Surgery

Dental disease, untreated or treated incorrectly, can rob your pet of a comfortable, happy life. This is why it is so important that they receive regular home dental care, along with high quality medical attention when needed. Though our emphasis is on prevention of dental disease (see Preventative Dental Home Care for Your Pet), treatment and oral surgery under general anesthesia is sometimes necessary. In such cases your pet will receive the following from Cinder Rock Veterinary Clinic:

1. Pre-anesthetic exam and a thorough oral exam under anesthesia
2. Pre-operative pain medication
3. General anesthesia (see anesthetic information)
4. Dental radiographs of every tooth
5. Detailed dental medical records and periodontal charting
6. Oral nerve blocks for extractions
7. Post extraction radiographs
8. Sterile surgical tools for each patient
9. Ultrasonic cleaning and polishing
10. Doctors, technicians and assistants with advanced dental education and training
11. State-of-the-art dental and surgical equipment
12. Post procedure pain medications when indicated
13. Detailed written after care instructions with preventative care plan
14. Complimentary appointment for preventative care training with a technician
15. Doctor on call to answer after-hours questions
16. Progress exam with the doctor if needed

Preventing any disease, including dental disease, is always preferred. The benefits of maintaining your pet's oral health is well documented. There can also be significant costs if dental disease develops and oral surgery becomes necessary. We are committed to providing your pet the best quality care possible so they can live a long, comfortable and happy life.
